Mr. Wilson approached and told the Court the committee was gathering information on the system processes and getting an understanding of the system support on each of the departments. Mr. Wilson said there were four departments currently under review: Public Works, Engineering, Purchasing and Criminal Justice. Each had a tentative schedule for which the committee wants to report back to the Court. The committee wants a report on Purchasing at the end of December, Engineering at the end of January and Public Works at the end of February. Criminal Justice was not scheduled at this time. The reports would include operational and functional descriptions, process maps, recommendations for improvement, detail implementation plans and a schedule when the improvements should be completed. The report would also include a detail on the cost savings to the County. Commissioner Jaynes said he wanted an update on the committee's meetings, such as when the meetings are held, who attended, etcetera. Commissioner Jaynes asked why the County's Web Master, Larry Jones, was the point person for the committee. Caren Skipworth, Information Technology, approached to reply saying Mr. Jones represented the County and works with departments regarding the website as well as Preventative tests and the cost of each test, which are available to the employees, were also shown to the court. Questions and discussion with the Court members continued throughout the presentation.

Ms. Jacobson informed the Court that annual wellness exams do not require a co-pay so long as the employee has not exceeded the annual $750 benefit.

The presentation ended with a slide showing a contribution survey with the County's peers, which was at the request of Commissioner Hoagland. Judge Self opened the floor for discussion. (Time: 10:57 a.m.)
