Program-Specific Requirements

RSAT funds may be used to implement two types of programs, residential or jail-based jail-based residential SUD treatment or jail-based pretrial SUD treatment.

Residential programs should:

- Engage inmates for a period between 6 and 12 months;
- Provide residential treatment facilities set apart—in a completely separate facility or dedicated housing unit in a facility exclusively for use by RSAT participants—from the general correctional population;
- Focus on the inmate's substance abuse diagnosis and addiction-related needs;
- Develop the inmate's cognitive, behavioral, social, vocational, and other skills to solve the substance abuse and related problems; and
- Require urinalysis and/or other proven reliable forms of drug and alcohol testing for program participants, including both periodic and random testing, and for former participants while they remain in the custody of the local government.

Jail-based residential SUD treatment programs should:

- Engage inmates with SUD or co-occurring substance use and mental health disorders for at least 3 months;
- Separate the treatment population from the general correctional population;
- Focus on the inmate's substance abuse diagnosis and addiction-related needs;
- Develop the inmate's cognitive, behavioral, social, vocational, and other skills to solve the substance abuse and related problems;
- Require urinalysis and/or other proven reliable forms of drug and alcohol testing for program participants, including both periodic and random testing, and for former participants while they remain in the custody of the state or local government; and
- Prepare offenders for successful community reintegration that may include post-release referral to appropriate evidence-based aftercare treatment and/or service providers including those that support the use of medication-assisted treatment.

Jail-based pretrial SUD treatment programs should:

- Initiate or continue evidence-based SUD treatment programs, including medication-assisted treatment, in pretrial populations during their confinement; and/or
- Foster connections to SUD treatment in the community upon pretrial release.

Programs supporting pre-trial populations do not need to meet the criteria listed above for jail-based residential SUD treatment programs.

All applicants are required to provide substance abuse treatment practices and services that have a demonstrated evidence base and that are appropriate for the target population.
